July 11, 2018 — God's First Commandment: Go Make Babies! Father Dominic Clemente

In Genesis 1:28 we read God's first commandment, "Be fruitful and multiply." Often the Church is blamed for stifling sexuality and even hating sex while that couldn't be further from the truth. In this session we will learn how God and His Church love sex and how we are called to love in the right way.

July 18, 2018 — Women in Our Church, Sister Patricia Crowley, OSB

A presentation that will look at some of the great women in the Catholic Church both past and present with a focus on the role of women today.

July 25, 2018 — Jesus & the Avengers: Superheroes, Scripture and the Greatest Team-Up Darius Villalobos

Scripture is supposed to be an important part of our faith-lives, but sometimes it can be hard to follow, it doesn't always make sense, and may not resonate in our own lives. To help us understand scripture better, it helps to compare it to things that we do know and understand. This talk will let us examine the similarities and differences between the Sacred Word and popular fiction today. We will examine, through different mediums, how the battle between good vs. evil has sparked our interests and imaginations for generations, learn about biblical themes in modern day stories and reflect on how our own story fits into the greatest story ever told.

August 1, 2018 — Faith and the Public Realm, Jenn Delvaux

Today's politics have us more involved than ever. Pop culture resurgence of political stories like Hamilton and a renewed interest in shows like West Wing (thanks to podcasts) have us paying attention more than ever to government. But what is the importance for us as Catholics? What is our role in politics, the public sphere, and protests as people who follow Jesus and as Catholics? Just the thoughts of a political scientist turned pastoral minister who can quote West Wing, but promises not to subject you to off-key versions of Hamilton.
